MARCHING HOME

One day the lad you had from babyhood marched away to war. It seemed then that the sacrifice various instead of his. Later you visited him in camp and said goodbye, before he went overseas. As his tears mingled with yours and he pressed you to his heart the burden seemed greater than you could bear, your hearistrings all but snapped. Last month your boy came home to you, strong, broad-shouldered and handsome, better physically and mentally for his training. Then your joy knew no bounds, nothing in the whole world mattered, you had him safe at home. Lutheran Church Notes By Rev. C. R. Lowe.

Lest some should think, from the last writing, that the preacher's idea of work of the church was but the preaching and nothing else, I write It was my intention to include in this idea of preaching the gospel, the whole ministration of the Word to men. Of this, preaching is but a part. What I did mean was that the church and the preacher were to confine their work to the ministration of the gospel as over against the doing a lot of things that are not in connection with the gospel. Not an agitation for this, a sermon on something that is not even religious in its character, moral generalities. A sermon is the explanation and application of a text from the bible, and while a deal of good may be brought about by the discussion of the various topics before the public, and they have their place, their place is not in the pui-pit. All these things may be good or the mental and moral and finan-Rev. S. A. Draise was away several days during the past week visiting Sunday School boards, in the interest of the Centenary-World Program. all things that are good, the church s not a department store. As Christ intended it and commissioned it, it has a highly specialized work, and that is to preach Christ crucified, and administer the means of grace. The church is not an institution for social work, tho it has a great deal to do with society, it is not a soup dispensory the it has a great deal to do with the poor and the alleviation of their sufferings, it is not a preacher of morality the it insists on a moral life. The preaching of the church is godliness and piety, faith in Christ, and the submission to the will of the Most High.

In the working out of this thing, there is a lot of work that is not done in the pulp? done in the pulp". A great deal of it is done on the road, that is in A the home of her son, John N.
